Reflections on the 27th Anniversary of the ADA
The Chairperson noted on July 25th, the 27th anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act would occur, signed in 1990 by President George H. Bush and amended in 2010 under his son, George W. Bush.
Conversation with Canines for Kids (Kristin Hartness)

Canines For Disabled Kids (CDK) is a national program based in Worcester founded in 1998. The mission is “Increasing independence for children with disabilities and their families by promoting service dog partnerships, understanding and awareness throughout the community.”

CDK to support the creation of child-canine service dog teams to promote independence and social awareness. Offering free services to families and communities across the United States, CDK helps connect children with the service dog that can best help them overcome limitations caused by a variety of disabilities while helping communities to be welcoming and supportive of the special canine tools being used. Scholarships to help cover the training costs are offered, another way CDK helps to bring these teams together.

A 501C3 non-profit organization, CDK work to support children and service dogs on their road to being as independent as possible.

CDK began in 1998 as an offshoot of the NEADS, Dog for Deaf and Disabled Americans training program. Very few service dog programs were willing to provide trained service dogs for children. CDK believed it was possible to train dogs to help autistic children, children with hearing impairments, other physical disabilities and set out to help families find the best training programs for their children.

It costs $25,000 to $30,000 for training dogs –$45,000 for running dogs.

A service animal is a dog or miniature horse that is individually trained to do work or perform a task for a person with a disability is covered under the Americans with Disabilities Act.

There is a difference between service dogs and emotional support animals. Emotion support animals can be more than doge and are protected by the Fair Housing Law.
There is a growing list of legal tasks service animals are being trained to do. These tasks and training relate specifically to the user’s need for access to the world rather than the world being brought to the person with a disability.

The dogs always must be under the handler’s control. Service dogs are never allowed to be aggressive. When a dog is working no one should touch or speak to the dog. Seek permission to touch the dog before touching. If not the dog is distracted from the work being done for the owner. Users should be trained to interrupt people who are touching their dogs.

Canine For Kids offer programs to educate people on service dogs.

The law dictates that there are 2 questions that anybody can ask the user:

1. Is the dog required because of a disability? Yes or no
2. What task has the dog been trained to do that directly relates to the person’s disability? The user needs to tell the task that this dog was trained to do.

In a court situation, proof of dog ownership is needed.

It is important that people who have service dogs be able to answer these questions but call people out if they are not. What is going to stop the abuse to fake service dogs in general populations? There is a proposed state bill where if someone is caught faking they would be required to do community service and pay a fee.

Education is a big piece. CFK is working on a capstone project with Clark University that proposes that all city clerk’s office ask the 2 questions when individuals are applying for their dog licenses. The town/city could then issue a service dog tag and would be a public record. Yes, some people could lie but it changes from an intent issue which has criminal implications versus a convenience factor.

Training of dogs begins as early as 2-3 days and 8 weeks. The right match between the owner and dog is important. CFK dogs come from all over the place. The working years of a dog depends on the dog’s size and the work the dog does. Dogs with disabilities can be trained but it depends --- for example if a dog is hearing impaired the owner would have to communicate with sign language. Most training will not train dogs that have a disability.

Allergies and fear to dogs are not valid reasons for denying access to a person using a service dog. This portion of the law is to be helpful ensuring access is not limited to the user.

Who can use a service dogs? Any adult or child with physical or psychological disabilities – everybody has to be considered individually.

Service dogs cannot be protective or aggressive. Responsibility it is never the facilities to be responsible for the service animal. The handler is the responsible party. If the dog is out of control the owner and dog can be asked to leave the establishment.

Insurance at this time does not see a service dog as a medical cost that can be reimbursed or paid. There is an effort to petition insurance companies to cover the cost of service animals. Some organizations have endowments and don’t charge people or non-profits ask people to fundraise money or offering scholarships there is also funding through VA – must me a member of Training Dogs International.

The Chairperson thanked Ms. Hartness for her presentation.

Interactive tour of the new city website (Jacob Sanders)

Jake Sanders works for the City Manager on intergovernmental affairs and other projects. The City is preparing to roll out the new website late this summer or early fall, the accessibility recommendations made by the Institute for Human-Centered Designed have been followed.

A pilot was launched a couple weeks ago with a few changes: vibrant and cleaner look, restructured to make more sense, more intuitive, responsive design that transforms the page depending on what device (computer, cell phone etc) you are using.

Current site is too verbose. They have cut down content and made it so you can do quick searches. There is a new calendar that links to meeting details/agenda, location, as well as directions. Also new searchable databases, for example open checkbook. Also utilized external links to keep information updated.

Some of the accessibility features include – coloring and contrasting of site, increased font sites, alphabetized links, descriptive tags for images, standardized pdf’s, and google translate.

The following questions were asked and responded to:

- Will there be an audit to make sure content is coming the way they suppose to?

  Goal is to have each department helping making it better, concise, centrally located items

- Will there be a map to highlight how to get to things- locations?

  We are in the process of incorporating maps

The access to pilot website is pilot.worcesterma.gov. Mr. Sanders asked Commissioners to send feedback via the survey and thanked them for their recommendations.

The Chairperson thanked Mr. Sanders.
