Who we are and what we do:

We are Worcester Consumer Rights Program (WCRP) and we work in cooperation with the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office (AGO).

The purpose of the Program is to provide amicable mediation to consumers who are involved in a dispute or have a complaint against a business that is licensed to operate in Massachusetts.

The program is voluntary and does not carry any cost to either the consumer or business. You may file your complaint directly (in person or by mail) with our office or online with the AGO.

Why Mediation:

Mediation is an alternative to what may typically become a lengthy legal process. The program's objective is to find resolution to consumer complaints by eliminating the court process.

Through mediation, parties (consumer and business) involved in a disagreement are presented the opportunity to work out a common solution with the help of a mediator.

The program does not enforce a decision on either of the parties. It rather assists in guiding both parties to reach a common solution. Since parties involved in the dispute play active roles in resolving the dispute, they are subsequently comfortable and supportive of the solution.

Successful mediation typically results when both parties are willing to find points of agreement and find a common ground for compromise.

What's next:

The Worcester Consumer Rights Program (WCRP) office will review your complaint and make a determination to mediate the complaint.

If our mediation efforts are not successful, you will be notified and directed to other local and statewide resources that may be available to you.

We may also send you other useful information that may assist to become a better-informed consumer.
